A bit about the Eisteddfod history

Eisteddfod y Dysgwyr has been held in North East Wales and North West Wales separately for many years, but this year we have decided to join both and hold a North Wales Eisteddfod. It's a very informal do, with everyone sitting around the tables and the bar will be open if you prefer an alcoholic or non-alcoholic drink.

The word Eisteddfod is derived from the Welsh word eistedd, meaning "to sit", and bod meaning "to be" and therefore means "to be sitting" or "to be sitting together" ("bod" is softly mutated into "fod").

An eisteddfod is a Welsh festival of literature, music and performance. The tradition of such a meeting of Welsh artists dates back to at least the 12th century, when a festival of poetry and music was held but, with the decline of the bardic tradition, it fell into abeyance. The present-day format owes much to an eighteenth-century revival arising out of a number of informal eisteddfodau.
